Study on the Development and Evaluation of a Novel Modified Release Pellet-based System for the Delivery of Desloratadine and Pseudoephedrine Hydrochloride

Sachin U. Kushare¹, Atul A. Phatak^{1*} and Praveen D. Chaudhari¹

DOI: 10.9734/bpi/tpd/v6

ABSTRACT

Modified-release multiple unit dosage form (MRMUD) of desloratadine and pseudoephedrine hydrochloride with different release profiles were prepared. The MRMUD system consisting the immediate-release pellets of desloratadine and sustained release pellets of pseudoephedrine hydrochloride was formulated by using solution layering technique. A 3^2 full-factorial design was employed to optimize the sustained release formulation where in polymer ratio (Ethyl cellulose: hydroxyl propyl methyl cellulose) (X1) and % polymer coating (X2) were taken as independent variables and amount of drug release, in 0.1N HCl (Y1), after 10 hrs (Y2) were taken as the dependent variables. Optimization studies were carried out using the Design Expert Software. Formulations were evaluated for in vitro release studies; the release data were evaluated by the model dependent (curve fitting) method using the PCP Disso software. The in vitro drug release followed Hixson-Crowell model and the drug release mechanism was found to be anomalous or non-fickian type. It was found that proper combination of ethyl cellulose and hydroxy propyl methyl cellulose polymer, % polymer coating and process parameters could provide sustained release of pseudoephedrine hydrochloride for a period of 12 hrs. The statistical approach for formulation optimization is a useful tool, particularly in simultaneously evaluating several variables. The observed responses were in close agreement with the predicted values of the optimized formulations, demonstrating the feasibility of the optimization procedure in developing sustained release formulation.

Keywords: MRMUD; desloratadine; pseudoephedrine hydrochloride ethyl cellulose; HPMC; solution layering technique.

1. INTRODUCTION

The single-unit oral dosage forms (capsules or tablets) and multiple-unit dosage forms like pelletized dosage forms have closely similar drug release profiles but the pellets offer several added therapeutic advantages [1,2]. The pellets spread uniformly throughout the gastrointestinal tract. They are also found to empty gradually from the stomach with less intra and inter individual variations, thus giving better predictability for an administered dose. In contrast, the gastric emptying of a single unit dosage form is at random and with inherently large inter and intrasubject variations [3]. With the use of pellets, the risk of high local drug concentrations and toxicity associated with the intake of locally restricted tablets can also be avoided [4]. Premature drug release from enteric-coated tablets in the stomach, potentially resulting in drug degradation or gastric mucosal irritation, can also be reduced with the coated pellets owing to their rapid transit time. Use of a mixed polymer coating was reported to show improved performance of enteric-coated pellets, in which the ratio of polymers in the mixture was the determining factor for drug release rate [5,6,7,8,9]. The risk of dose dumping from pellets is equally divided, and it is less likely that the pellets are disrupted [10]. Furthermore, modified-release profiles

Formulation and In-Vitro Characterization of Oseltamivir Fast Dissolving Tablets Using Super Disintegrants

R Y Patil¹, Atul A Phatak², Shrishail M Ghurghure^{1*}, Sachin Yanjane¹

Abstract: The aim of the present study was to formulate fast dissolving tablet of oseltamivir using superdisintegrants with the help of solid dispersion technique to improve the aqueous solubility, dissolution rate and to facilitate faster onset of action. Solid dispersion of oseltamivir was prepared with PVP K30 in different drug: carrier ratio using solvent evaporation methods. The optimized solid dispersion (drug: PVP K30, 1:0.5 ratio) were further used to prepare fast dissolving tablet by direct compression method using superdisintegrants such as croscopolidone and xanthan gum. Infrared spectroscopy, differential scanning calorimetry and x-ray diffraction were performed to identify the physicochemical interaction between drug and optimized formulation. The pre-compression parameter of prepared powder blends all formulation suggested good flowability and compressibility. The prepared tablets were evaluated for thickness, hardness, friability and weight variation, drug content, wetting time, disintegration time and in-vitro dissolution studies. The batch F12- shows highest release of 99.87 % in 25 min.

INTRODUCTION

Tablet is defined as compressed solid dosage form containing medicament with or without excipients. In recent decades, a diffusion of pharmaceutical analysis has been conducted to develop new indefinite quantity forms. The novel drug delivery systems are to increase safety and efficacy of drug by formulating convenient dosage form and to achieve better patient compliance. [1] The matter of swallowing is also a standard development throughout a geriatric patient because of worry of choking, hand tremors, dysphasia and in young people because of underdeveloped muscular and nervous systems this results in a poor patient compliance which may be improved by the fast dissolving tablets. [2] The ideal drug delivery systems have two things would be needed first: it might be one dose the period of treatment whether or not it's for days or week, like infection, or for the life time of the patient, as in high blood pressure or diabetes. Fast dissolving tablets are also called as mouth-dissolving tablets, melt-in mouth tablets, Oral dispersible tablets, rap melts, porous tablets, quick dissolving tablet. Fast dissolving tablets dissolve in the oral cavity without water. Most fast dissolving tablets have substances to mask the bitter taste of the active ingredient. [3]

Oseltamivir is administered orally, it is an antiviral drug for the management of influenza A and B infections in children >1 year and adults of all ages. [4] Standard dose of oseltamivir in adult's is 75 mg, while children have unit doses that are selected on the basis of body weight. Oral capsule (35, 40 and 75 mg) and suspension formulations are currently promptly on the market. As fast dissolving tablets can hold the dose up to the 500mg we can suitably administer 75 mg of dose. The mouth disintegrating tablet of oseltamivir will disintegrate rapidly in the patient mouth without need of water or chewing and released its drug contents instantaneously. So this dosage form is more comfortable for paediatric, geriatric patient. [4-5]

Solid dispersion of oseltamivir was prepared with PVP K30 in different drug: carrier ratio using solvent evaporation methods. The optimized solid dispersion (drug: PVP K30, 1:0.5 ratio) were further used to prepare fast dissolving tablet by direct compression method using superdisintegrants such as croscopolidone and xanthan gum. Infrared spectroscopy and differential scanning calorimetry were performed to identify the physicochemical interaction between drug and optimized formulation. [6-7]

Advantages of Fast Dissolving Tablet: [8]

1. Improved compliance/added convenience
2. No water needed
3. No chewing needed
4. Better taste
5. Suitable for controlled as well as fast release actives
6. Ability to produce benefits of liquid medication within the style of solid preparation.
7. Allows high drug loading.
8. Adaptable and amenable to existing processing and packaging machinery
9. Cost-effective.

MATERIALS AND METHODS

Oseltamivir were received from Zydus Cadila Ltd, Ahmedabad. PVP k-30, Croscopolidone, Mannitol, Magnesium stearate, Talc was received from Shri sai Chemical, Solapur.

Calibration Curve of Oseltamivir

Accurately weighed 10mg of drug was transferred to 10 ml volumetric flask and dissolved in methanol, this was considered as stock solution. From stock solution 0.1 ml, 0.2 ml, 0.3 ml, 0.4 ml, 0.5 ml, were taken and was make up the volume to 10ml with methanol to get respective concentrations of (10, 20, 30, 40 and 50) µg/ml. Prepared samples were analyzed by using ultraviolet double beam spectrophotometer at λ_{max} 218 nm.

Preparation of Oseltamivir Fast Dissolving Tablet

1. Step-1 Solid Dispersion Technique-Solvent Evaporation Method

The solid dispersions of oseltamivir were prepared by dissolving the mixture of oseltamivir and the PVP K 30 at
